INUIT EMPLOYMENT PLAN RFP

2.0 BACKGROUND

2.1 Location

Iqaluit is the capital of the Nunavut Territory and is located at the south end of Baffin Island near the end of Frobisher Bay (63° 45'N latitude and 68°31'W longitude). Access to Iqaluit is provided by regular scheduled commercial aircraft year round, snowmobile trails from other Baffin Island communities in the winter, and sealift from the port of Montreal and Valleyfield in the summer.

2.2 Geology and Terrain

Iqaluit's location is above the tree line and within the continuous permafrost zone of Canada. The region generally consists of glacially scoured igneous/metamorphic terrain. In some locations, a thin layer of organic material is found.

2.3 Climate

Iqaluit has an Arctic climate with an average January temperature of -21.5°C and July average temperature of 8°C. The annual precipitation is made up of 19.2 cm of rainfall and 255.0 cm of snowfall for a total of 43.0 cm precipitation. The prevailing winds are northwest at 16.7 km/hr.

2.4 City Growth and Population

The City of Iqaluit is the newest Capital City in Canada and as a result has experienced a period of rapid development and growth. Iqaluit is the seat of government for the Territory of Nunavut and is the home base for many federal and territorial government departments. The City has rapidly developed into a regional center for the territory with many Northern businesses, governments and Inuit organizations making it their base of operations. The City is also a hub for transportation and gateway to the Eastern Arctic. Its new International Airport and the development of a deep water port and small craft harbor are a result of the demand for increased transportation infrastructure in Iqaluit, connecting it to other Arctic and southern communities. The influx of newcomers to Iqaluit from the south and other communities has resulted in an increasingly multicultural city. The fast-paced growth of Iqaluit has stretched much of the city's development and its resources. The City is struggling to keep up with being able to effectively deliver services such as sanitation and water/waste water. The current population of Iqaluit is estimated at about 8,000 people.

2.5 Land Ownership System

Iqaluit has a unique land ownership system. The major land owners in Iqaluit are the Commissioner of Nunavut, the City of Iqaluit and the regional Inuit associations. These entities in turn lease land to individuals, corporations and other government departments. The City land is administered by a land acquisition by-law and by a Territorial Statute. Generally speaking, there is no private ownership of land.

INUIT EMPLOYMENT PLAN RFP

2.6 Corporation of the City of Iqaluit

In 2018, approximately 8,000 people resided in Iqaluit. Approximately 56% (4,480) of the population identify as Inuit. The City of Iqaluit is one of the main employers in the community, with 143 full-time employees, 50+ part-time employees and 50+ casuals. The City provides citizens a number of services including water/sewer (trucked and utilidor), garbage pick-up, road maintenance, engineering and capital projects, provision of land for development, emergency services (fire, ambulance, dispatch), municipal enforcement (traffic, loose dogs, unsightly lands, etc.), and recreation (arenas, aquatic centre, youth centre, curling rink, elders' qammaq, camp programs, etc.). In addition, management and administrative support is provided to the various departments and divisions as well as to City Council.
