Weather Watch – Warm Temperatures, Ice and Snow

November 28, 2023 - Iqaluit, Nunavut

Temperatures this week are forecast to stay just under the freezing point, with significant snowfall and some wind expected. The City of Iqaluit would like to remind motorists that those weather conditions make for very slippery roads. These conditions are expected to last most of the week.

Please take your time, approach intersections carefully, and be aware of other motorists and pedestrians.

City Roads crews will be working hard throughout the week to keep the roads clear and sanded. Please give them room to do their work, and help us all stay safer by driving carefully.
